Please include our entire statement in whatever piece you publish:

After a review of your e-mail, unfortunately, much of the information you shared is misrepresented or wholly untrue. It also appears that the goal of this article is not to understand what Hope4Cancer does, nor is it to provide an unbiased, credibly sourced, informative piece.

We offer integrative treatment options to patients from around the world, but acknowledge that our program is not for everyone. You have solicited stories for this piece from a social media platform group with a documented history of spreading misinformation and intentionally removing testimonies and stories of praise for Hope4Cancer, including NED (no evidence of disease). Your handpicked stories do not provide a complete and accurate representation of our patient population nor do they fairly represent the Hope4Cancer experience.

Finally, to the extent you have received information from a former federal agent openly disclosing the existence of an ongoing "FDA investigation," that, on its face, should give you pause about the authenticity of the information you have. To Dr. & Mrs. Jimenez's knowledge, there is no such FDA investigation, especially not one concerning issues outside that agency's jurisdiction.

It is Hope4Cancer's mission to deliver excellent medical care and provide hope to individuals facing a diagnosis. We offer an alternative path and empower individuals to make informed decisions about their care. We have served patients and families in this capacity for more than 25 years. Our goal is to continue this medical mission with the utmost professionalism and care.
